Bolsa Chica: Its History From Prehistoric Times To The Present

Synopsis

The history of a 1200 acre coastal marsh in Orange County, California known as Bolsa Chica. The story begins in prehistoric times and continues through two decades of citizen involvement that resulted in the marsh's rescue from becoming a massive marina development. The book ends with a description of the largest coastal marsh restoration ever attempted in Southern California

Customer Reviews

This is an excellent book about the history of one of the last California wetlands. Through the perseverance of citizens of Orange County, particularly Huntington Beach, a struggle with developers, politicians, oil companies was won to preserve, protect and restore an important ecological wonder. This book tells that story in such a way that keeps you coming back chapter after chapter. Jennifer Robins
